Increased Demand, Tight Supplies Mark Cotton, Wool Situation

Continued large imports of cotton textiles and raw wool can be expected during 1976, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Keen consumer interest in natural fibers and a recovery in the general economy are creating a strong domestic demand for cotton and wool that U. S. Supplies may not be able to meet.

On the domestic market, nearly a fifth of all cotton products sold over American retail counters this spring is expected to have been imported -- an increase of about 7 percent from 1975. Most of the increased shipments during recent months are print cloth and sheeting fabric from the People's Republic of China. The increase in imports translates into an apparent reduction in U.S. mill use of about 400,000 bales.

Increased demand, coupled with tightening supplies, have caused cotton prices to rise substantially over the past year. Responding to higher prices, farmers have indicated that they will increase planted cotton acreage to about 11.3 million acres -- 16 percent above 1975 but one million acres below the average for the past five years. Strengthening cotton prices since April 1 could result in more acreage being planted to cotton -- particularly in Texas where recent rains have brightened planting prospects.

With strong demand foreseen for 1976-77, combined mill use and exports could total as much as 12 million bales, if supplies are adequate. However, it now appears that the availability of supplies will be a limiting factor and could hold disappearance as low as 10 million basles. Exports alone may range between 3½ and 4½ million bales.

Commercial stocks of apparel wool have fallen sharply from 41½ million pounds on January 1, 1975 to the 17-18 million pound range on January 1, 1976. As a result of the tight supply situation, wool imports have increased markedly. In the first two months ran at an annual rate of 32 million pounds, compared with a 1975 total of 17 million pounds. Farm prices are expected to increase from current levels, perhaps averaging in the 60-70 cents per pound range in 1976.

THE MEMORIAL POPPY

The poppy as a memorial flower for American war dead is a tradition which began in the years following the First World War. Veterans returning to their homes in this country remembered the wild poppies which lined the devastated battlefields of France and Flanders Field . . . and the soldiers of all nations came to look upon this flower as a livng symbol of their dead comrades' sacrifice.

It was Col. John McCrae, a Canadian officer, killed in WW I who immortalized the flower in his famous poem "In Flander's Field the poppies blow . . ."

Today - over 50 years later, that little symbolic flower continues to pay tribute to those who made the supreme sacrifice in World Wars I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam Conflict.

However, it is more than a symbol . . it is a source of hope and aid for many in our nation. it is a handmade flower - made by disabled vetrans as a part of their therapy and to aid their rehabilitation, they receive financial assistance for their work. In addition, the funds from Poppy Day are used exclusively for assistance to veterans and their families in time of distress.

Each poppy fells its own story . . no two are fashioned alike. And - similarly, each wearer of this poppy tells a story of Memorial tribute and of aid to someone who needs that helping hand of understanding.
